"Malmö University is famous for its modern approach to teaching and the friendly and a easy going atmosphere between staff and students. I doubt if there is any other place that compares to Malmö University for the opportunity it gives you to make so many new friends from all over the world. Just by talking and socialising to my friends in class I've learnt so much about different cultures and attitudes towards life. It's impossible not to keep discovering new things and new possibilities whilst having 'fika' (Swedish for coffee breaks) with friends. If you want to broaden your international appreciation, have endless new experiences, and enjoy a great social life, Malmö University is the place to choose."

Welcome to Malmö University: a truly international university!

Malmö University

Founded in 1998, Malmö University is a young and dynamic institution located in the south of Sweden. One of the biggest universities in the country, it is home to 25.000 students, employs around 1400 people and has been central to the transformation of Malmö from an industrial town into a modern centre of learning.

Malmö University, which is conveniently located in the centre of the town and next to the central railway station, consists of five inter-disciplinary schools and faculties. Here different sciences meet under one roof, each discipline enriching the other, which means that our courses and programmes give graduates a wider outlook as they prepare for their professional careers.

Malmö University's schools / faculties are:

- Faculty of Culture and Society
- Faculty of Health and Society
- Faculty of Odontology
- School of Education
- School of Technology

English-taught programmes and courses in an international setting

In the academic year 2011-2012, Malmö University will offer six bachelor's programmes and 10 master's programmes in English. Students looking for a course in English rather than a programme will find that there are literally dozens available in a wide range of study areas. Malmö University offers an international study experience with about one third – around 6000 students – having a non-Swedish background. The English-taught programmes in particular attract students from all over the world, which creates an internationally diverse environment academically and socially. To broaden the international experience further,

Malmö University actively promotes student exchanges through its extensive partnerships with universities all over the world and its membership of the International Network of Universities (INU).

Living and studying in an international environment

Malmö – a charming town and vibrant metropolitan city at the same time. Home to more than 160 nationalities, Malmö eats, lives and breathes multiculturalism. It is the third largest city in Sweden and one of the most culturally diverse in Europe. Copenhagen Airport is just 20 minutes away from Malmö's central station, thus providing easy access to most of Europe's major cities. For those seeking relaxation locally, Malmö's beaches offer panoramas of outstanding natural beauty that are sure to refresh and inspire. Outside of Malmö, the country's unforgettably stunning landscapes are all very accessible.

A different learning approach: preparation for a successful career

The academic model at Malmö University is culturally unique and differs considerably from anywhere else in the world. It is renowned for its individual techniques at all levels of learning and because students take responsibility for their own development.

The open and interactive teaching environment at Malmö University encourages questions, critical thinking and meaningful discussions in lectures and seminars. Although students have a number of lectures each week, much of the work takes the form of independent studies and group work sessions. This unique and innovative learning approach, for which students need to take responsibility for their own time and studies, is specifically designed to give participants the best possible start to their careers.

Study in Sweden

Sweden is a safe, modern and forward-looking country in northern Europe that has developed an envious reputation globally as an innovative and creative force. Sweden's world famous corporate brands — such as Volvo, Ikea, Ericsson, H&M and Scania — complement its cultural icons of which Ingmar Bergman, Abba, Astrid Lindgren, Bjorn Borg, August Strindberg, The Cardigans, and Roxette are but a few.

The country has a long and proud history of academic excellence, with outstanding universities dating back to the 15th century. Sweden is the home of the Nobel Prize, the most prestigious academic award in the world.

Sweden's inspirational reputation for innovation is built on close cooperation between industry and academia. Swedish universities are renowned for their investigative research and independent thinking, and this reputation is built on the foundations of rigorous quality control and nationally certified degrees. The country has one of the most ambitious educational evaluation programmes in Europe, which ensures that its competitive academic edge is maintained.
