■ description

The MA in Euroculture in Krakow is an interdisciplinary and transnational Master programme. Students study in at least two universities in the consortium, from which they obtain a joint degree. It stands out from other European Studies programmes by its approach in which the citizen, instead of structures and models, is the central point of attention and reflection. It offers students the opportunity to study and discuss European integration issues such as multiculturalism, current political governance, European identity and evolving social-political processes. The international dimension of the programme allows for transnational cross-over comparisons of relevant concepts and their understanding in different regions in the world. It aims to prepare graduates for professions and research areas in which knowledge of contemporary Europe and European Union institutions are of relevance. The focus of the programme is on cultural and social developments in Europe, its heritage and identity as well as values, citizenship and cultural relations. The relevance of values, identity concepts and perceptions requires sensitive and well-informed professionals in this field to work as diplomats, bureaucrats, project managers, journalists and cultural consultants. The programme allows for intense networking opportunities and cross-cultural experience. The thematic scope of the MA focuses on the importance of cultural concepts and practices in the many fields of transnational contacts within and beyond Europe. It highlights manifestations of cultural self-understanding as an important element of transnational social and political developments. The programme transmits knowledge of European culture, heritage, values and identities, and therefore equips students with the cultural-reflexive competences necessary to analyse current transformations of Europe. From the beginning of the programme in 1999, 'Euroculture' was used as a concept to reflect in an interdisciplinary way on the many different expressions and manifestations of self-understandings of societies, social groups and individuals of, about and within Europe.

The second-cycle (MA) degree in European Studies at the Centre for European Studies of the Jagiellonian University is bound by the curriculum requirements for second-cycle degree programmes in European Studies, determined by the directive of the Minister of Science and Higher Education on July 12, 2007 on education standards for individual subjects, and levels of education, as well as methods and conditions for creation and provision of interdisciplinary and combined studies (based on Act of 27.07.05, art. 9 item 2 – Law on Higher Education – Journal of Laws of the Republic of Poland no. 164, item 1365, with later modifications). The MA programmes in European Studies (including three specialisations: European Studies, Central and Eastern European Studies, Europeanisation and Governance in Central and Eastern Europe) are high-level postgraduate courses taught in English. Students choose a study track in which they wish to specialise, and the MA degree with which they graduate reflects their specialisation.

* European Studies

This track focuses on the EU and European institutions and the key issues they face. Students develop a Central European perspective on the European integration process.
